Mandatory Evacuation Lifted for Georgia Barrier Islands

(ATLANTA) – Under the request and recommendation from local officials, Governor Nathan Deal is lifting the mandatory evacuation order for Georgia’s barrier islands at noon today. The governor, on Sunday, lifted the mandatory evacuation order for mainland Bryan, Camden, Chatham, Glynn, Liberty and McIntosh counties.

Local officials may still impose restrictions on reentry and residents and business owners seeking to return should check to ensure they meet all local requirements.

Residents should also be aware that some areas still lack critical life-sustaining services and infrastructure. Those choosing to return at this time may not have power, water or sewage services, and crews are removing debris from the right-of-way.

For additional information regarding conditions and services in local areas, contact your local emergency management agency.
